

Prof Theo Haupt

Prof Theo is recognized as a world-renowned expert in the field of construction health and safety. His 3 books on the application of construction health and safety are utilized as industry reference guides and as prescribed textbooks at various universities. Theo earned a Ph.D. from the University of Florida in 2001. The focus of his Ph.D. thesis was the development of a performance approach to construction safety and health. As a researcher and professor, Theo shared his expertise with students from 7 different universities over the years. He also held several leadership roles in the construction industry and academia, including acting as the Director of Building Construction Science at the Mississippi State University.

Prof Theo's published more than 50 articles in research journals over the years dealing with a wide variety of construction health and safety-related topics. He is also an accomplished international speaker who is often invited to share his expertise in construction health and safety with audiences around the world.